

There is a myth in the world of great achievements. The myth of 'I'; the single lonely genius who made it all happen. In Singapore, we're shattering this myth. We believe it's groups collaborating, and pushing each other on, that creates success. From nurturing thinking people through a world-class education system to supporting top talent, we encourage a healthy exchange of ideas to spark greater ones.

Like staging the first night race in Formula One's history. A feat that required urban and logistical planning to create a race circuit in the city centre, engineering and technical expertise for high-powered lighting, as well as marketing wizardry to draw crowds from the world over.

It is the perfect demonstration of how ready Singapore is to help make great ideas flourish. For you and your business. We call it collective creativity. But we think you'll just call it a very good idea. That works.

When it comes to teamwork, we'll give your business a head start.
